The CITCEM Research Centre will this year be organizing its Sixth International Conference on the theme My Errors, our Fortune: Mistakes as Adjustments, thereby attempting to reflect on the concept of errors and their importance, in particular in academic research and in the creative process.

Since this is the 2017 annual meeting of the whole CITCEM Research Centre, it is hoped that the Conference will integrate contributions from the different areas of knowledge which are fundamental to the four CITCEM research groups: Archaeology, History, Politics and International Relations, Geography, Artistic, Cinematographic, Cultural, Linguistic and Literary Studies. The Conference will, however, also be open to contributions from other academic disciplines, such as Philosophy, Life Sciences and Health Studies.

We would like to invite the national and international academic communities to submit proposals for papers in the following thematic areas:

- The concept of errors and mistakes
- Typologies of errors
- The importance of errors in academic research
- Mistakes in the creative process
- The right to err

The sessions will be organised in thematic groups, bringing together individual proposals or panels. The participation of younger researchers is particularly welcomed, as are presentations of posters and sessions on R&D projects.
